What type of shipping container do you manage in Thailand?

As a leading sea freight agent in Thailand, we manage standard 20ft and 40ft containers (regular or High Cube). Depending on your shipment volume, choose a full container load (FCL) or share space through less-than-container load (LCL). FCL is ideal for businesses with enough goods to fill an entire shipping container from China.

Does Siam ship to Thailand?

When shipping commercial goods or personal effects to and from Thailand, many companies rely on Siam Shipping's sea freight services. As a leading sea freight agent in Thailand, we manage standard 20ft and 40ft containers (regular or High Cube).

Who is Siam shipping?

Whether you're shipping to Thailand, exporting from Bangkok, or managing overseas freight shipping, Siam Shipping provides complete sea freight solutions tailored to your needs. As a trusted sea freight agent in Thailand, we offer FCL and LCL options, smooth customs clearance, and full support from pickup to final delivery.

How long does a SIAM shipment take?

Siam Shipping Tip: When you book with us, we always provide an estimated transit time. For example, a Bangkok-New York shipment typically takes around 35 days. While this is a good reference, external factors (weather, port congestion, strikes) can affect the timeline. Every international shipment requires precise coordination.
